

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE.

This book has been prepared with the conviction that the primary function of Latin Composition in secondary schools is to extend and strengthen the pupil's knowledge of Latin grammar, and that this function is best fulfilled by means of a systematic presentation of the syntactical principles of the language. The following Lessons, accordingly, are devoted mainly to exercises in applying the principles of the various case and mood constructions recognized in our Latin grammars. But in order that the writing of continuous discourse may not be neglected, passages of simple English narrative, involving the principles covered in the previous exercises, are frequently introduced.

The illustrative examples given at the beginning of each lesson have been drawn with great care from Latin literature, — mainly from Cicero's speeches. The English sentences set for translation into Latin have also, in most cases, been suggested by passages occurring in the works of classical writers. In the matter of hidden quantities I have followed the marking of my Appendix and of the fourth edition of my Latin Grammar.

Grateful acknowledgment is here made for valuable assistance and suggestions received from friends.

Observe that the accusative of the part affected (variously designated as Greek Accusative, Synecdochical Accusative, and Accusative of Specification) is regularly confined to poetry; such expressions as Virgil's ōs umerōsque deō similis should not be taken as models for prose writing. The Ablative of Specification (226; A. & G. 418; H. 480) is the proper case to denote this relation.

- 3. The Genitive of Possession, as compared with the Dative of Possessor, gives emphasis to the possessor; the Dative emphasizes rather the fact of possession, e.g. hortus mel patris est, the garden is my father's; mihi hortus est, I possess a garden.

No other writer, however, observes so strict a canon, and even in Cicero there is quite a percentage of exceptions. The ablative must be used in case of relative pronouns, i.e. always quō, quibus, not quam qui. On the other hand, when the comparative is an attributive modifier of a noun in an oblique case, quam is used, and the proper form of the verb esse is expressed, as verba Varrōnis hominis doctiōris quam fuit Claudius, the words of Varro, a more learned man than Claudius.
- 2. Note that Utor may take a second ablative (either noun or adjective) in the predicate relation, as quō duce Utōmur, whom shall we employ as leader? eō placidō Utōris, you will find (lit. use) him tranquil. The second ablative here bears the same relation to the first as a predicate accusative to the direct object.

I. The Ablative of Quality primarily designates qualities which are more or less transitory. The observation sometimes made that the genitive denotes internal qualities, and the ablative external ones, is not sufficiently exact. In the phrase hortatur ut bono animo sint, he urges them to be of good courage, the quality is internal; yet the genitive could not here be used; for while the quality is internal it is transitory. The theoretical distinction between the Genitive of Quality and the Ablative of Quality is that the genitive denotes permanent, the ablative transitory qualities. Yet where ambiguity would not result the ablative may be used to denote a permanent quality. Thus one may say vir summae virtūtis or summā virtūte, a man of the highest character.

In all numerical designations of weight, dimension, etc., the genitive is used.

- 2. Constituo, when denoting another act of the same subject, more commonly takes an infinitive than an ut-clause.
- 3. Prohibeo is much more commonly construed with an infinitive than with a Substantive Clause introduced by no. quo minus, or quin, e.g. si qui të introire prohibuerit, if any one should prevent your entering. In Cicero and Caesar prohibeo never occurs followed by a quin-clause, though it may take quo minus.
- 4. Impedio quin does not occur in Cicero's speeches or philosophical works, though impedio quo minus is frequent.
- 5. In general, after negative expressions of hindering quo minus is often used in preference to quin.

Cicero's Speech on Pompey's Commission.

When 4 the tribune Manilius had introduced a bill that Pompey be placed in command of the war against Mithridates, 5 the aristocrats stoutly opposed (him), some on the ground that absolute power ought not to be conferred 6 on a single man, others on the ground that all hope ought not to be risked 6 in one (person). But Cicero spoke earnestly in behalf of this bill; he enumerated Pompey's many excellent qualities 7 and previous exploits with so great eloquence and skill that he 8 was sent as absolute commander against Mithridates.

Cicero as an Orator.

There is no doubt that Cicero surpassed all his contemporaries in eloquence. At that time there was no one at Rome who had devoted himself so thoroughly to literature, no one who had studied philosophy so minutely, no one who was better versed in civil law, no one who had so great an acquaintance with Roman history. Furthermore he was so skilled in speaking that he moved the people or the judges in whatever way he wished, rousing them now to laughter, now to anger, now to weeping.

Cicero On Old Age.

Cato replies that old age is wrongly blamed, that its ills⁷ lie⁴ in the character not in the time of life⁵, and that he himself has not only not found old age wretched, but even easy and pleasant.

Remarks.

1. Note that verbs which have no participial stem express the future infinitive active and passive by fore ut or futurum esse ut, with the subjunctive, as sporo fore ut hostos arceantur, I hope the enemy will be kept off, lit. I hope it will happen that the enemy will be kept off.

The Death of Cicero.

Cicero was at his Tusculan villa with his brother Quintus when he heard that he had been proscribed by the triumvirs, and at once decided to set out for Astura. After he had twice embarked and twice returned to land, he came to his villa at Formiae. While he was staying here, he was informed that soldiers were approaching. Even then he might have escaped had he not been betrayed by a man whom he had once defended. When the soldiers had come up, he made no resistance and was quickly slain. His head and hands were taken to Antony at Rome and fastened to the Rostra.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

- I. might have escaped: see Lesson XLI, Rem. I.
- 2. made no resistance : nihil resistēbat.

- 17. legem scribendam curavit, he saw to the engrossing of the lazn.
- 18. eum jugulandum võbis trādidērunt, they handed him over to you to be put to death.

Remarks.

- I. Note that the perfect passive participle is often equivalent to a co-ordinate clause in English; as, C. Servilius Ahāla Sp. Maelium occupātum interēmit, Gaius Servilius Ahala surprised and slew Spurius Maelius, lit. slew him having been surprised.
- 2. Observe that the present active participle is used much less freely in Latin than in English. We employ it somewhat loosely to denote an act prior to that of the verb with which it is connected; as, 'Finding no means of escape, he surrendered.' Here the finding is anterior to the surrender. In such cases the Latin would employ some other form of expression; in that language the present participle is strictly limited to the expression of acts contemporary with the action of the main verb.

GRAMMATICAL REFERENCES.

- 3. The Supine. 340 entire; A. & G. 509, 510 and N. 2; H. 632 and I, 633, 635 and I, 2, 4.

 - 15. mīrābile audītū, wonderful to hear!

Notes on the Examples.

- 1) The Gerundive Construction could not be used here; plurium habendorum could be masculine as well as neuter, and would thus occasion ambiguity.
- 2) Note that fruor, like the other deponents governing the ablative, admits the gerundive construction.
- 3) Conservandi agrees merely in form with sui and vestri; in sense it is plural.

Remarks.

1. The dative of the gerund and of the gerundive are both rare in Ciceronian Latin; consequently the construction, though common later, is hardly to be imitated by the beginner in Latin writing.

The Character of Caesar.

It is difficult to form a correct judgment¹ concerning Caesar's character.² It is admitted⁸ that in early life⁴ he was dissolute, and that afterwards he showed no regard⁵ for justice and the laws. Yet he was (a man) of exceptional foresight, and saw not only from what evils the state was suffering but also by what means these could be checked. Yet on account of his premature death we cannot say how successfully he would have organized the government, if he had lived.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

- 1. form a correct judgment : recte judicare.
- 2. character: ingenium.
- 3. it is admitted : constat.
- 4. in early life: express by aduloscons in agreement with the subject of the dependent infinitive.
- 5. showed no regard: 'to show no regard' is in Latin non rationem habore, construed with a gen. of the thing.
 - 6. would have organized : see 322. b.
 - 7. government: res publica.

Latin Lessons.

By Professor Charles E. Bennett, of Cornell University. 16mo, cloth, 191 pages. Price, 70 cents.

PROFESSOR BENNETT is a believer in the old-fashioned method of beginning Latin, that is, learning the forms first, learning them in order, and learning them once and for all. The Latin Lessons is a book that sends the beginner directly to the grammar for forms and rules, taking them up in their regular order. Complete sentences are found in the very first lesson, and easy stories are introduced as soon as the pupil has learned enough grammar, in the regular order, to read them. Teachers who believe in the method of "resolute, systematic, and sustained attack on declensions and conjugations" will find Professor Bennett's new book admirably suited to help them in their work.

A. L. K. Volkmann, Volkmann School, Boston, Mass.: I like Bennett's Latin Lessons very much. You are getting somewhere, and you know what you have got, and you get the whole thing, which is the main point.

The Foundations of Latin.

A book for Beginners. Revised Edition. By Professor C. E. BENNETT, of Cornell University. 12mo, cloth, 250 pages. Price, 90 cents.

THIS book presents the matter for the beginner in Latin in sixty chapters, the first thirty-five devoted almost entirely to inflections, the remaining twenty-five to syntax, both subjects being treated in the order in which they are usually found in the grammar. Such rules of syntax as are needed for reading and writing simple sentences are given in the earliest lessons, so that the pupil has constant drill on the forms while acquiring them; but the systematic study of general syntax is postponed till the pupil shall have mastered the forms. The book serves equally well as an introduction to Caesar or Nepos.

Dr. R. M. Jones, Penn Charter School, Philadelphia, Pa.: We have adopted Bennett's Foundations of Latin. It is the best book of its class.

George D. Bartlett, Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, N.Y.: I have used a great many introductory Latin books, and have found none so satisfactory as Bennett's Foundations of Latin.

Cæsar's Gallic War.

Books I.-IV. Indicated quantities, Introduction, Notes, Vocabulary, Illustrations, and colored Maps and Plans. Edited by Professor CHARLES E. BENNETT, of Cornell University. 12mo, cloth, 352 pages. Price, $1.00.

In his Cæsar, Professor Bennett has had constantly in mind the point of view and the needs of the elementary pupil. No pains, therefore, have been spared to make the Notes simple in style, clear in statement, and pertinent and interesting in content. Every real difficulty receives consideration and explanation, particular care being taken to indicate the course of the thought and the connection of ideas. Book II. has been annotated with especial fulness for the benefit of those teachers who prefer to begin with this book rather than with Book I.

In matters of grammar and syntax, the editor, while following the treatment and nomenclature of his own Latin Grammar, has also inserted references to the other Latin grammars in common use. An Introduction of thirty-one pages treats of Cæsar's life and of the Roman art of war as practised in his day.

Cicero's Orations.

Indicated quantities, full Introduction, Notes, Vocabulary, Illustrations, and two colored Maps. Edited by Professor Charles E. Bennett. 12mo, cloth, 374 pages. Price, $1.00.

THIS edition includes seven Orations,—the four Catilines, the Manilian Law, Archias, and Marcellus.

The aim of the editor is not merely to help the pupil to a correct rendering of the text, sentence by sentence, but also to bring out the larger relations of thought which make these speeches masterpieces of the art of oratory. With this in mind, the Notes are intended to give a full historical outline of the circumstances of each oration, to keep the pupil in touch with the logic of the argument, and to give an adequate explanation of all points of Roman law or custom.
